

FREE Quilted Pot Holder Tutorial

Copyright Jacquelynn Steves

For personal use only.
May not be copied without written permission. May not be sold. Thank you!

www.JacquelynnSteves.com

Today we are going to make a potholder! I will show you how to make this particular block, but you can use this method to make a potholder out of any of your favorite blocks (Hint- this is a great way to use up orphan blocks or test blocks that you may have laying around. Because seriously, do you really need another pillow? Me neither....)

For this project, I used my fabric line Fruitful Hands (Henry Glass Fabrics). Let's get started....

All seam allowances are 1/4". Here is what you will need:

- 4 1/4" square of focal print (keep in mind that if it is directional, like mine, the square should be cut on the bias)
- 1 - 3 7/8" square- green polka dot
- 2 - 3 7/8" squares- orange
- 4 - 3 1/8" squares- yellow
- 2" wide by approximately 42" long strip of striped fabric for binding
- 1 1/2" x 4" green polka dot (for loop)
- 9" square backing fabric (I used the focal print)
- 9" square insulated batting (from The Warm Company, see photo at right)

Start by cutting the green square into quarters diagonally, then repeat with the orange squares:

Sew an orange triangle to each yellow square:

www.JacquelynnSteves.com

Then sew another orange triangle to the other side. Cut off those little "dog ears":

Sew 2 of these units to opposite sides of your focal print square:

Sew a green triangle to opposite sides of the remaining 2 yellow square units:

Sew the large triangle units to opposite sides of the focal print unit to make a block (approximately 8 1/2"):

Layer the backing (right side down), the batting, and the block together. Your backing and batting will be slightly larger than the block. Pin or spray baste layers together. Quilt as desired. I just "stitched in the ditch", in other words, right along the seam lines. Trim away excess batting and backing.

To make the loop, press the piece of fabric in half lengthwise, then open up and press the raw edges toward the center fold (right sides out). Then fold in half lengthwise again and top stitch along edge:

Fold in half and sew to top edge of front of potholder (I forgot to take a photo before I started sewing on the binding, so you can see the binding there. Just ignore that for now. Just sew that loop on. So sorry...)

www.JacquelynneStevens.com

Now we are going to talk about the binding. Fold the strip in half lengthwise with right sides out and press. Fold in one of the short ends diagonally and press. Pin binding to one edge of potholder and sew as shown in photo:

Fold the strip up, then fold it down, and pin. Stitch along edge, starting and stopping 1/4" from corners:

Continue sewing binding all the around the potholder. When you come back to the first side, trim the binding so that it fits inside the folded starting end of the binding. Sew along edge to finish binding.

Fold the binding to the back of the potholder and pin in place. Machine stitch "in the ditch" along the seam. (You can also hand stitch the binding on the back, but machine stitching will hold up better to repeated washings. It's also faster- and we like that.)

*Ta-da! Potholder completed.
Now go make 100 more. Christmas is coming.....*

Please visit my website & blog-
I'd love to "meet" you!

Click here:

www.JacquelynnSteves.com

Click here to subscribe to my free e-magazine, full of patterns, projects, recipes, beautiful photography & illustrations.

It's inspiration delivered right to your inbox!!

